THE WIDOW'S HOPE.

BY E. P. COMAN.

Sleep on, my babe, and in thy dream
Thy father's face behold,
That love again may warmly beam
Upon thy mother cold.
He wooed fond embrace to give,
To smile on one he smiled,
Alas! let all the softer live,
To bless no orphan child.

Thy mother sits those lonely hours
To watch thy slumbers light,
And lower Life's quick-withered flowers
To droop with streaming eyes.
Yet, oh, our waking hours have lost
Their dearest vision left,
Or fled, and leave their glory cast
For ever under shade!

And still, the dawning, stricken heart,
In every bleeding wing
Thy grief has mangled with severe sport,
Finds yet wherewith to cling!
And yet wherewith its hold to take
With strength, despite grief,
Because of joys it held to break
Or melt within its sleep.

A blest has proved that in the mid
I learned to sigh, high tower!
Pale Death has laid his reeking hand
Upon thy flower!
And now, my tender nurse, lay
Sweet bud of hope, I see
My spirit of life, my sister joy,
My all, wrapped up in thee.

I fear to murmur in the air
Of Thy will—of the blow
And utter the Knot of Tartors here
To lay thy father low.
I ask His will to be done—hear—
To say, "Thy will be done!"
That Heaven will still in pity spare
The widow's only son.

The Princess Nhirmah.

A BRIDAL STORY.

By Miss Pardoe—author of "The City of the Sultan."

It is strange how these events, which to the most sincere redolent of joy or happiness, are the principal actors rejoice with least-hearted and modest pleasure, while the trifling incident can be hotly echoed back in boisterous mirth to the depth of a farthing; and strange how the piece of greatness must be paid, even although it be but in the coinage of sorrow—slowly and slowly through a long life, like blood-drops from the heart; and it rather is that brought a holiday seeking crowd, that the gaunt spectre of reality is not permitted like the Angel of the Exodus, to enter, to take its seat to the feast, and startle them into a knowledge of the misery poor souls! Ah, how many victims and their imprisoned revel.

The day of the week had elapsed since Custantinople had held a general holiday; since her population had been startled out of their fire, and thousands had collected together like one to gaze, and hear, and wonder; whisper or shout for joy! Every thing in the Imperial Household was in the interest of the then-ruler. It could not well be otherwise; for the Sultan was the source of unchecked prosperity and unfailing favor which have descended, it will be readily conceived, as it then suffered to rest, lest it should mar the fair interest of the moment, to the present—and the flashing of jewels, the solar of costly garments and the many-colored robes of state that was surrounded, that the idol to whom all this incense was offered up was already lying cold and stiff in the altar of the Mosque of Eyoub.

That the roses of the bridal wreath had fallen, and withered, and died, before the bride of the day knew it; and that the victim of an unfeeling policy was already consigned to the tomb of her husband, ere the music ceased to sound, and the lights were extinguished in the palace of Beshiktash.

Yet were there wanting many among the Pashas themselves who were easily taught to look with distrust and suspicion upon the increased rivalry of the young and high-spirited Mustapha, and who, in the hopes of a better and more favorable change, were ready to lend their support to the ambitious views of the Sultan's mother, and to the secret intrigues of the Sultana Validé, who, in the hopes of securing to her latticed apartment, weeping eyes and sorrowful countenance, and yet thus it was: even I myself, when the first rumor reached me, that I had been summoned to the throne from among the many who sighed without venturing to aspire for her hand, would have made myself conspicuous in the midst of thousands had collected together like one to gaze, and hear, and wonder; whisper or shout for joy! Every thing in the Imperial Household was in the interest of the then-ruler. It could not well be otherwise; for the Sultan was the source of unchecked prosperity and unfailing favor which have descended, it will be readily conceived, as it then suffered to rest, lest it should mar the fair interest of the moment, to the present—and the flashing of jewels, the solar of costly garments and the many-colored robes of state that was surrounded, that the idol to whom all this incense was offered up was already lying cold and stiff in the altar of the Mosque of Eyoub.

Yet were there wanting many among the Pashas themselves who were easily taught to look with distrust and suspicion upon the increased rivalry of the young and high-spirited Mustapha,

DEATH OF MATHEW CAREY.

It is with much regret that we announce to our readers the death of the venerable Mathew Carey. He was a few days since thrown from a carriage by which he received a severe injury of the head, from which at the time thought dangerous, but it is supposed that the injuries he received may have aggravated the infirmities of his age, and thus hastened the close of his death. We copy the following deserved eulogium from the National Gazette.

A native of Ireland, he came to this country during the last century, and was engaged for many years as a printer and bookseller in Philadelphia, where he realized a ample fortune. During his business life, but particularly since his retirement from it, Mathew Carey has been one of the philanthropic persons. With a clear mind and a benevolent heart, a disposition to do good to his fellow men, and a determination to carry objects of reform and amelioration in society, which he had once undertaken, he accomplished more than all the recommended literature of the present day when the ostentation of philanthropy is the order of the day. As a writer he is remarkable for the concise array of facts which set forth the subject on which he wrote, and the logical reasoning by which they were presented to the public. Many of his writings were more than twenty years ago, and yet they are not obsolete. Many of the topics which he discussed then are presenting their novelty to the public mind.

At the Pat Chase Tavern, about six miles from Bangor, Maine, on Saturday, 1st inst., there were sold by public auction, averaging about three feet high, at 31 cents average price; and 1,000 trees not sold at that price, were bought in at 25 cents. Since that they have sold from 40 to 75. Roots have sold as high as $1.20.

To Silk Producers.—The Royal Assembly of Piedmont at Turin, has offered a premium of 500 dollars to the first person who shall in the course of the year 1839, have reeled 50 lbs. of silk produce in the island of Cuba, two hundred miles from the United States.

Morus Multicaulis.—One hundred Morus Multicaulis Trees were sold in this city the past week for one hundred dollars.—Saturday Evening Reg.

A resolution has been introduced into the Council at Richmond, to inquire into the expediency of cultivating Mulberries on some waste grounds near the Poor House, with a view to employ its inmates in the production of raw silk, &c.

Practical Silk Culture.—Mr. Thomas White, of Mount Holly, has sent to this city some manufactured velvet from native silk. He is a want of silk of 6 to 10 threads. His price for cocoons is $4 a bushel. Fine goods of silk will, he says, increase the profit so much that a pound of raw silk will be worth $25.

Series of Morus Multicaulis Trees.—The following sales of trees have been made within the last two weeks, viz: 90,000 in East Hartford, at 20 cents a tree; 50,000 in Weathersfield, at 25 cents; 12,000 in Glastenbury, at 40 cents; 2000 in Berlin at 37½ cents; and a gentleman in Middletown has paid 62 cents a piece for 1000.

We learn that about 300,000 have actually been sold this season in the vicinity of Hartford. Of these 70,000 have been sold to go to Pennsylvania; 50,000 to Michigan; 30,000 to New Jersey; 30,000 to Massachusetts, and 10,000 to New York.—Hartford Courant.

Splendid Morus Multicaulis.—Among the curiosities exhibited by the Horticultural Society at the Hall, we saw a splendid specimen of the genuine Morus Multicaulis, raised by Mr. Jacob Haines, of the poor house in Gloucester, Camden. The tree exhibited is about nine feet high, full of immense side branches, and was taken from a field of 60,000 trees of nearly similar size, which were planted by Mr. Haines part of April last. To those persons who have never seen the Multicaulis in full growth, the tree we have alluded to will be a curiosity. The entrance of the plant, when raised in a suitable soil. Such a tree will at this time of year, if planted, one pound of leaves, which may be given with equal success to the silk worm as the young sprigs now selected for that purpose. Another tree of the Multicaulis, of the same size, will double the quantity of leaves, and a great addition may be made to the crop.

The Dioramas in season street, representing the departure of the Israelites out of Egypt, will close positively on Monday.

THE HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION

The exhibition of the Horticultural Society during the past week at the Philadelphia Museum, in Chestnut street above the Hall was elegantly decorated with columns, arches and pyramids of flowers. The plants were tastily arranged along the centre of the Hall upon scores of tables, and presented a most beautiful appearance to the eye in every variety of aspect the richest and rarest plants, shrubbery and flowers. The most tempting luscious fruits were scattered around in seemingly reckless profusion, and we saw more than one fair daughter of Eve looking as if she could pluck it bought forbidden. Of the dahlias, we think that those from Hirst & Dreer carried off the palm. There was a delicate pink one upon the stand of which we forgot the name, and a splendid yellow one, the largest we have seen in every variety, and some of the largest and richest noises that we ever beheld. The display of pears was one of the finest. Vegetables of all sizes and kinds were arranged around the Hall, among which we noticed a squash which weighed one hundred and eighty pounds. To do justice to the exhibition would require several columns. The society has fully proved that it is a good thing, and the happiest results may be anticipated from its future exertions.

The exhibition will be continued throughout to-day and evening.

Extract of a letter to the publisher, dated Mobile, Sept. 11, 1839.

I trust I may be spared to read your interesting account hereafter, but I much weighted for the mortality by yellow is awful—the city is almost depopulated by death and desertion to other—a number of nearly 4 weeks failed to bring its usual beneficial results, and now a chilling "norther" by the sudden change of temperature increases the sickness, although as yet the cases are becoming less malignant—the ravages of the disease thus far have been virulent beyond precedent, as far as the closest observation can determine. The number of deaths average now about twenty daily, while the white city population cannot exceed 2000, and the coloured 3000—we can not be either agreeable or interesting news to you.

THE CREW OF THE AMISTAD.

The case of these unfortunate blacks seems to increase in interest from week to week—and their case will be tried before the United States Court for the District of Connecticut, which commences its session on the 23d inst. They are to be counselled on all hands, since the matter has become more thoroughly understood, that they cannot be tried as pirates, but since they have been claimed by the Spanish Government through the Consul, their fate, should the demand be acceded to, could not be expected to be less severe than that of slavery for life, and to save them, and nothing but the clearest proof, that the Government of Spain is entitled to them will induce our people to consent to it.

Selling aside the more technical right of the Government of Spain which may arise under the treaty between that power and this, the strong claims which they possess upon the humanity of their friends, will not be disregarded. There never has been a case more presented, bearing upon the abstract right of holding men in bond-age, in which less of the prejudices of the question who offer as this question should mingle. Yet we see that many papers will not seem to consider it as in some way connected with Southern interest. No folly can be more lamentably gross. It is altogether a mistake on the part of our Southern friends, to make a cry question which either intimately or remotely bears upon the freedom of the black, an occasion of sounding an alarm. The country is sufficiently agitated by questions which legitimately bear upon southern and northern interest, without engaging in by the loud and harsh outcries totally foreign, separate and distinct. As for ourselves, we shall await the light which the investigation judicially may afford. We know that the cause of humanity is there is one thing officially as well as wisdom, and amid the multiplicity of statistics, it is difficult to obtain even a glimpse of truth as it is.

LITERATURE.

Opinions of Lord Brougham on Politics, Law, &c. Edinburgh: Fox & Howe. Philadelphia: Carey & Hart.

These volumes are made up of extracts from the speeches and writings of Lord Brougham, and are prefaced by a long sketch of his character. They are valuable as far as they unfold the early history and opinions of this great statesman, and they will doubtless be extensively sought after.

"The Gift for 1840"—Edited by Miss Leslie, Philadelphia, Carey & Hart.

This beautiful annual is already published—splendidly embellished, and of literary contents of a high character. The engravings, with a single exception, are by American artists, and several of them are from Sully's pencil. Mount, and several others are from distinguished artists. We cannot suffer the occasion to pass without expressing our admiration of the engraving of "The Ghost Book," by Mr. G. H. Cuseger, a young artist whose genius has not been appreciated but by a few. We had the pleasure of viewing the original, and we think that the engraving is not sufficiently dark to embody the conception of the master. It lacks the terror, with which the original piece is clothed.

The contributors are Messrs. Walsh, Park Benjamin, Fox, Neal, Hoffman, Mrs. Miss Louisa Lee, Gould, Whiteman, Bosch-ler, Mrs. Sigourney, Mrs. Lockery, and others whose names we have not seen. The editorials, by far, say of its predecessors, and reflects high credit upon the editor and publishers.

The poem of Onion translated by James Mac-Farren, Esq., to which are added a life of the Translator, and Critical Notices of Burns. By Thomas, Cowperthwait & Co.

This is a beautiful edition of the poems of Onion and contains some valuable documentary evidence, which sheds some light upon the times, and the literary men of the age. We are informed about the authenticity of the poems. It is a work much needed in American libraries, and we have no hesitation in saying that but few works are issued in this country of which the letter-press is more superior.

There can be but little doubt, however, at the date, that Onion was the author of the most of the poems, and that his travels among the Highlands brought within his reach the scraps of poetry which had lost it was to their credit in the Gaelic bard. At the same time it cannot be supposed, that the thoughts were in all cases original with Onion, for he was a great scholar and a deep student, and in the construction of these legendary scraps so ingeniously with his own composition, that the critic is confounded, and cannot discover where it would be safe to venture to separate the wheat from the chaff. Perhaps nothing ever made a greater noise in the literary world, than the first appearance of these poems, and they certainly seem to be the present day, a subject of much speculation with the scholar. We commend this elegant edition to the notice of our readers.

The New York Directory for the present year, is said to contain 28,800 names, and it is a singular circumstance that of this large number, about one twelfth of the whole are comprised in eight words of four names. A correspondent of the New York Gazette, who has counted the most numerous names in the Directory thus obtains the result:

Smith 572; Brown 376; Clark 192; Williams 155; Taylor 154; Johnson 151; Miller 149; Jones 145; Brown 136; Wilson 128; Evans 122; Thompson 120; Wood 118; Davis 113; Martin 111; Wilson 111; Hall 102;—Total, 2744.

The Philadelphia Directory, for the City and Liberties, exclusive of the towns, names which may be considered part of the suburbs, contains, upward of 36,000. Of the above more common names selected by the New York Gazette, the number in Philadelphia is as follows, the aggregate even exceeding that in the former city:

Smith 1,151; Brown 1,000; Clark 1,000; Williams 195; Taylor 160; Johnson 206; Miller 200; Moore 199; Jones 180; Thompson 150; White 149; Wood 148; Davis 146; Martin 105; Wilson 169; Hall 69;—Total,—2821.

TITLE OF NOBILITY.

On Tuesday last, says the United State Gazette, gentlemen of this state dined one hounded and fifty-two years after the first dinner was given in honor of the city, and informed him that he had recently arrived from Ireland; that previous to his departure he had been requested to take charge of a large mahogany box without fastening, and leave it and its contents with the Mayor of Philadelphia, to be retained by him until called for by the gentleman to whom it was addressed. The Mayor, having taken cognizance of the contents of the box, received it in charge of the Lord-keeper, yesterday, in the Mayor's room, and saw the box. It contained a splendid massive silver waiter, twenty-one inches in diameter, with highly ornamental engravings in the centre of the magnificent piece, is the following inscription, beautifully engraved:—

"To Presidents of Philadelphia Allen, Esq. of Pittsburgh, United States, formerly of Litterkinny, Ireland, by his creditors, as a testimonial of their high esteem of his upright and honorable conduct in paying in full the balance of their accounts, although previously discharged from all legal obligations.

Signed in behalf of the creditors at large,
Belfast, April 1839. JOHN MCCLEERY.

CONVENIENT.

Our readers will perceive from the following statement which has been made by the New York Sun, that publishers must be sometimes put to their wits end, when favored with letters containing money. We have often seen the same thing in the same manner. It is a matter which should be remedied. There are 17 counties and 120 post towns in the United States, bearing the name of "Franklin," and 9 other towns with "ville" or other finale attached to the name; and in the event the cases are becoming less malignant—the ravages of the disease thus far have been virulent beyond precedent, as far as the closest observation can determine. The number of the deaths average now about twenty daily, while the white city population cannot exceed 2000, and the coloured 3000—we can not be either agreeable or interesting news to you.

PICTURE OF THE TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA—PENNSYLVANIA.

Jail Delivery—The annihilation of the Court of Criminal Sessions, for the present term, has in all probability consigned the discharge, upon two or three persons, of all the persons who, on the charge of offences.—Am. Sent.

Serious Accident from Intemperance—John Serious Accident from Intemperance—John Sprout, wife of Mrs. Hannah Sprout, boarding-keeper, Sixth and Brown street, while in a state of intoxication, wounded a gentleman who was standing on the Exchange Reading Room, he had his pocket-book picked from his coat-tail pocket, and drafts will of course, be of no use to the pickpocket gentleman, and it is to be hoped he will detect the imposition.—Sylvester & Co.'s Daily Reporter.

Philadelphia Manufactures take the lead. Mr. Baldwin, of this city, has received the contract for building the locomotive engines. It is but little more than Mr. Baldwin should get, for the superiority of Philadelphia mechanics.

The Hungarian Question—We regret to hear, by the Caledonia of their published reply to the recent attack made upon them in the Democratic Standard," these gentlemen have been arrested, and held to bail in the sum of two thousand dollars. It strikes us that there was something extremely cowardly in the original publication of the vulgar attack, something very repugnant to the spirit of the times, that met with such a rebuke from the papers under arrest, for defending their fame.—Keystone.

Golden Age—The present must be a time of peculiar suffer much detriment, if these days are to be so denominated. Not a day has passed or proceeded for black mail, in the way of bonus for being let alone, or for liberal inducement to stay away.—Phila. Gazette.

Horrible—A night or two since, one of the Police officers in the Third Ward found a boy seated with his wife during the night, and resolved to do it in the morning. The boy was punished by eight lashes on the bare posterior, with that accursed instrument of torture, a medical man who sat back after the infliction, says that it was literally torn to pieces. The boy was but eight years old.

Barrier Indicted—A case came under the cognizance of the Grand Jury yesterday, in which a young apothecary of this city by I sold quantities of laudanum instead of paregoric to a child, was indicted for manslaughter. The jury, however, after consulting near Paintyard, and who unwittingly administered it to their child, and returned a verdict of not guilty. The young man was accordingly arrested and held to bail before Mayor Roach. As the case took place in the private room, we could not ascertain many particulars; these, however, are stated.—Public Ledger.

Amusing Incident—William Alexander Amusing Incident—William Alexander Somerfield—Myers was brought before Mr. Roach, yesterday and committed, on the charge of having, on the 4th inst., passing counterfeit notes upon the Bank of the Northern Liberties, amounting to upwards of forty or sixty dollars, only, in those notes, were of the denomination of ten dollars. They attempted to pass them off at one or two tailoring establishments in Market street.

Fire—On Saturday afternoon two young entered the store of Mr. Wm. Berns, and asked for a pair of boots, for one of them, and then gave him a counterfeit ten dollar bill on the Bank of the Northern Liberties. He left a young man in the store while he went to the Bank of Penn Township to get change, and it to be a counterfeit. During his absence of the young man who had left the note to see before George Giles, Esq. where he could get the same as William Thompson, afterward said it must be counterfeit, and the name.—Ledger.

Mean Case—In the course of last Sunday night, a young man, about twenty-four or twenty-five years of age, accidentally fell from the window sill from the fourth story window of house at the N. W. corner of Third and Market streets and was killed. The fall was not rather late, and is supposed to have been occasioned by the fact of his not seeing the doorway of the window. Holt was engaged in the service of the Philadelphia Bible, immediately under the building referred to, and upon them information was given to the coroner. Drs. Rush and McClellan were immediately summoned, and attended with every care. The former there are very getting over the effects of the wounded man, but he is insensible, and it is feared that he will not recover. He resides with his parents at a lake hour on Monday afternoon.—Ledger.

Farmer's Inquest—A man named Yackley, 43 years of age, in a weak and emaciated condition, came to his death in Moyamensing, on Monday evening, and died suddenly. On Tuesday evening, it being unknown, the corpse was called, and an inquest held, the body of Mr. Yackley, when it was found to be his death, he said he had a wife and family in Philadelphia; but he did not know that his body will be kept at the Green Room a few days.—Ledger.

Horrid Seizures—We learn that a person in the employ of some of the extensive importers of the recent seizures of smuggled goods, has made a full and complete disclosure of the important testimony as connected with the affair, stating as well the names of the principal actors, number of individuals, and involves a large sum of property.

Fire—Wm. Williams and Chas. Brady were taken before Alderman Shandler on Monday morning, charged with setting fire with burning cabbage in Washington Hall, on Saturday night, and committing surety and no home. The owner of the cabbage being known, the Alderman, to save the trouble of carting it home, ordered it to be given to him without trial.

Early Frost.—Accounts from Frankford, say that there was very heavy frost on Saturday last; great fears are entertained that the potatoes will be much damaged by it.

Burning.—A child in Juniata county, Pa. left in the kitchen, reached to get a coal from the kitchen coal, and falling plunged it up to the body in the tempting coal.—Ledger.

Slate Lots.—We learn that the United States Court has decided that the Slate Lots claimed by the last legislature of $2,054,000 in the Delaware opposite Kensington, and sold by the Berks county Bank.—Penn.

Marshall College.—The annual commencement of Marshall College, Mercersburg, will be celebrated on the 24th inst. The address before the literary societies of that college is to be delivered by Joseph R. Chandler, Esq.

Iron Rail—A fact for the Temperance Men.—The Monday morning train of cars, after the completion of her hull without a drop of liquor of any kind, and without the knowledge or assistance of any of the hands employed on her, or on the ship yard. Let the fact be noted, since this is the first time that the boat's nozzle has been laid down the ways into the water, crackling and foaming with Old Monongahela.—Pittsburg Gazette.

"It was out of the question," he said, "for a man to go into the world of business sober."

With this very pardonable exception, we think the Temperance cause is progressing.—Pittsburg Advocate.

It is stated that we have no more convicts in the Penitentiary than there were when the present institution has increased fifty per cent.

Northern Claim.—If Nehemiah Newman Norwood, of Newman, Milton, Pa. he will receive the information he requested from the war department dated 30th September, 1783, for three months' service in the Revolutionary War, in the 3d Pennsylvania Regiment. Also an order for Timothy Packwood, for service, for the duration of 100 acres, to be land. This is dated January, 1796.—Millenium.

NEW YORK.

Size of Oats—Specimens of thousand six hundred ninety-four, being an increase of about per cent. per annum, since the census of

Large Corn Powder Accident.—The Cherry Valley Gazette says—We learn that a young man by the name of Peter Sommers, Jr. of the town of Hartwick, was severely injured on the 27th from the iron bit him on his pantaloons, which he had on, which had a pound of powder, hand through two of three thickness of cloth, then reached the powder, which ignited. The young man is most shockingly burned. Some hopes are yet entertained of recovery.

Deaths last week.—The number of deaths in New York last week was 467. Of these 33 were of old age; 37 boys and 34 girls. Of the number 30 died of consumption; 24 of dysentery; 14 of diarrhœa; 8 of convulsions; 7 of scarlet fever.

Scalded to Death.—A child 4 years of age, named Daniel P. Halsted, residing in N. York, fell into a kettle of water on the 3d instant, afternoon, during the absence of the servant and was scalded to death.

The Life Boat of the Roxbury India Rubber Company when tested at New York bore the weight of fifty soldiers and a six pound field piece with great ease, while the firing of the gun had no perceptible effect upon the boat. The experiment showed its fitness for the purpose for which it was constructed.

Jail in June is to be too late.—On Monday forenoon, to Mr. E. B. Peck, of the firm of Thomas Peck & Brothers, that he must see his clerk in the Exchange Reading Room, he had his pocket-book picked from his coat-tail pocket, and drafts will of course, be of no use to the pickpocket gentleman, and it is to be hoped he will detect the imposition.—Sylvester & Co.'s Daily Reporter.

Mean Case—In the course of last Sunday night, a young man, about twenty-four or twenty-five years of age, accidentally fell from the window sill from the fourth story window of house at the N. W. corner of Third and Market streets and was killed. The fall was not rather late, and is supposed to have been occasioned by the fact of his not seeing the doorway of the window. Holt was engaged in the service of the Philadelphia Bible, immediately under the building referred to, and upon them information was given to the coroner. Drs. Rush and McClellan were immediately summoned, and attended with every care. The former there are very getting over the effects of the wounded man, but he is insensible, and it is feared that he will not recover. He resides with his parents at a lake hour on Monday afternoon.—Ledger.

Farmer's Inquest—A man named Yackley, 43 years of age, in a weak and emaciated condition, came to his death in Moyamensing, on Monday evening, and died suddenly. On Tuesday evening, it being unknown, the corpse was called, and an inquest held, the body of Mr. Yackley, when it was found to be his death, he said he had a wife and family in Philadelphia; but he did not know that his body will be kept at the Green Room a few days.—Ledger.

Horrid Seizures—We learn that a person in the employ of some of the extensive importers of the recent seizures of smuggled goods, has made a full and complete disclosure of the important testimony as connected with the affair, stating as well the names of the principal actors, number of individuals, and involves a large sum of property.

Fire—Wm. Williams and Chas. Brady were taken before Alderman Shandler on Monday morning, charged with setting fire with burning cabbage in Washington Hall, on Saturday night, and committing surety and no home. The owner of the cabbage being known, the Alderman, to save the trouble of carting it home, ordered it to be given to him without trial.

Early Frost.—Accounts from Frankford, say that there was very heavy frost on Saturday last; great fears are entertained that the potatoes will be much damaged by it.

Burning.—A child in Juniata county, Pa. left in the kitchen, reached to get a coal from the kitchen coal, and falling plunged it up to the body in the tempting coal.—Ledger.

Slate Lots.—We learn that the United States Court has decided that the Slate Lots claimed by the last legislature of $2,054,000 in the Delaware opposite Kensington, and sold by the Berks county Bank.—Penn.

Marshall College.—The annual commencement of Marshall College, Mercersburg, will be celebrated on the 24th inst. The address before the literary societies of that college is to be delivered by Joseph R. Chandler, Esq.

Iron Rail—A fact for the Temperance Men.—The Monday morning train of cars, after the completion of her hull without a drop of liquor of any kind, and without the knowledge or assistance of any of the hands employed on her, or on the ship yard. Let the fact be noted, since this is the first time that the boat's nozzle has been laid down the ways into the water, crackling and foaming with Old Monongahela.—Pittsburg Gazette.

"It was out of the question," he said, "for a man to go into the world of business sober."

With this very pardonable exception, we think the Temperance cause is progressing.—Pittsburg Advocate.

It is stated that we have no more convicts in the Penitentiary than there were when the present institution has increased fifty per cent.

Northern Claim.—If Nehemiah Newman Norwood, of Newman, Milton, Pa. he will receive the information he requested from the war department dated 30th September, 1783, for three months' service in the Revolutionary War, in the 3d Pennsylvania Regiment. Also an order for Timothy Packwood, for service, for the duration of 100 acres, to be land. This is dated January, 1796.—Millenium.

Size of Oats—Specimens of thousand six hundred ninety-four, being an increase of about per cent. per annum, since the census of

Large Corn Powder Accident.—The Cherry Valley Gazette says—We learn that a young man by the name of Peter Sommers, Jr. of the town of Hartwick, was severely injured on the 27th from the iron bit him on his pantaloons, which he had on, which had a pound of powder, hand through two of three thickness of cloth, then reached the powder, which ignited. The young man is most shockingly burned. Some hopes are yet entertained of recovery.

Deaths last week.—The number of deaths in New York last week was 467. Of these 33 were of old age; 37 boys and 34 girls. Of the number 30 died of consumption; 24 of dysentery; 14 of diarrhœa; 8 of convulsions; 7 of scarlet fever.

Look to your Goods.—The merchants of Chillicothe complain most bitterly of the knavery that has been practised upon them during the line of the Erie or Ohio canals. Many packages of goods have been opened, and pieces purloined. Some of the merchants of Buffalo are aware of this, and have all their boxes hooped, to guard against depredations.

A Man and a Hat.—Three robbers attempted to break into a store at St. Louis recently. They became alarmed by hearing a noise made by the clerks inside, one of whom, as the party retreated, fired at and shot one of the robbers, who is now lying at the hospital in that city, not expected to recover.

The Death of a Robber.—The St. Louis Bulletin says—We made known to our readers that the individual who was shot at Mr. Henderson's store by the night watch, died at the hospital yesterday evening. His name, according to his own account, was James Monks, but he has been recognised by several persons as Piet Hall, of Jefferson county, Missouri.

The Whent Crop Wet.—The Michigan City Register says, in La Porte county, as a general thing, the wheat is not more than half secured, and better cannot be found. A similar report comes from Milwaukie and the rest of the husbandman in Wisconsin, but owing to the great scarcity of field hands, a vast deal will remain unharvested. In some parts of the country they are able to cut the grain, but having no help to bind it, are compelled to leave it standing if cut and getting it in market, have stacked it in the field.

Selling Liquor on the Sabbath.—The authorities of St. Louis, Missouri, appear determined to put down the sale of liquor on the Sabbath, and the 31 instant imposed fines of from fifty to $25 on a number of persons, for violating the law on that subject. The City Council of St. Louis have also imposed a tax on the business of retailers of ardent spirits, coffee houses and taverns, of $200 a year, which will bear heavy on the small dealers, will raise the whole cost of a license to $444. The, the St. Louis Republican recognised by several persons as Piet Hall, of Jefferson county, Missouri.

A Comet.—We copy the following paragraph from the Cleveland (Ohio) Herald: "A beautiful comet may now be seen in the heavens in the West just after sunset. It may be easily found, being considerably brighter than the planet Jupiter. Its brilliancy much exceeds that of any Comet heretofore seen.

A correspondent of the Iowa, Patriot, in some very interesting sketches of Iowa, says, "the Indians in the vicinity of the land, are dancing before the type of the white man, the Hoo!"

SOUTHERN.

Twenty-five miles of the Mississippi and Pear River railroad were finished on the 31st ult. and the cars commenced running that distance on the 1st instant. A splendid locomotive is built at Natchez for the depot. It is two stories high, and will draw 60 tons 30 miles per hour. It is also a machine shop, which is two stories in height, 30 feet deep by 40 front, with a wing one story high, 85 feet front by 34 deep.

Railroad Accident.—On Thursday night last, as the cars of the Lexington railroad were attached, was proceeding on the Fredericksburg and Richmond Railroad, at the rate of nine miles an hour, it was thrown off the track, and one of the passengers was killed on the spot, and others. The other locomotive was immediately sent off from Richmond, and arrived at the spot but half an hour after the accident which gave any thing but a comic inclination to the denouement. Mrs. Coad, who lived in Hall's Hill, Pitcher, in passing cost of the wings to go on to Mrs. Coad's house, and the hall light. A tenement of air blew her dress, which was of gauze, against the gas jet. The dress caught in the centre of the stage, her whole dress was destroyed in a few flashes. The alarm was given and screamed, and a man in the gallery called out "knock her down and smother her." A gentleman who was near her did so, but ere they could reach her she had fainted. The person who knocked her down, instead of with little other injury to the lady, who is a widow, and has a child under the age of ten.—New York Times.

A rope-walk at Montreal, 2000 feet long, belonging to Mr. Cameron, of Quebec, (N. Y.) was destroyed by fire on the 10th inst. to the short space of 20 minutes.

EASTERN.

Work Suspended.—The Boston Mercantile Journal says that between two and three hundred of the mechanics and laborers at the Navy Yard in Charlestown have been discharged from operations connected with the yard.

Melancholy Accident.—We learn from the Portland Advertiser, that on Thursday last a party of young people, consisting of two boys, about 14 years old, and six girls of about the same age with another of mature of the children, went on a pleasure excursion to the islands. They proceeded to Peak's island in a small boat, and as the boys with two of the girls were passing to the east end of the island, the boat filled, and instantly most and the four children were thrown into the water. The weight of the girls clung to the side of the boat for about three quarters of an hour, when it also was upset, by another boat, which happened to pass that way; the other girl, whose name was Prentiss, about 14 years old was drowned. She was taken from the water at the same time the other girl was, having been supported by her clothes for her clothes. The boys reached the shore in safety.

Fire at Gloucester.—The Cape Ann Collector.—Col. Beach, late Collector of Gloucester, (Mass.) was examined before Judge Davis on Friday last, on the charge of having in his hands the public receipt for bounty money. The witnesses were Messrs. Low and Parsons, who acknowledged that they had quarrelled with him, generally about the Fish Bounty, and that there was a spite in the case, and the Judge, without argument, ordered the defendant to find bail in $1000.

Another of the Africans, called Bostah, died on Wednesday morning last in the jail at New Haven. He was the last of the number of the Africans who died since they left Havana.

Fit for the Penitentiary.—A man Nobody Good.—Nantasket Beach is covered with thousands of dead fish, which have been driven ashore by the deep sea, and now constantly drifting in with every tide. The farmers there are busy getting in the manure of this wonderful work of the world.

Black Hornets.—The Fall River Patriot of the 12th inst. has the following account of a singular phenomenon:

Night before last the hearers presented a very unusual appearance. It was a clear starlight night, and the sky appeared to be on fire in the southwest, and northeast directly opposite each other. The fire in the southwest was by supposed to be a column of smoke, but it soon appeared to be in motion, and commenced to rise and varied their position in the usual way, only that they would rise and fall together, and not as stars over which they passed. They stretched away from the opposite columns, so that about the middle of the heavens they met in the east. We never before have seen or heard of a black hornet flying by night.

A Big One.—Mr. John L. Blake, of Springfield, Mass. has a white birch on Main River last week, which weighed nine and a quarter pounds; and measured two feet ten inches and a half in length. It was cut in two in the middle, and by all odds "that we have ever known taken from the woods."—Springfield Gaz.

The Rhode Island Bank.—From July 5th to September 3d of this year, the specie in the bank has been increased near five millions, and the circulation decreased six and a half millions.

Fire from Lightning.—Albert Bartlett, son of the Hon. John Tenney, of Methuen, was killed by lightning on the 4th inst. He was standed by her little brother, on the bank of the Soguet river, on the 31st ult. fell into the water and was drowned. Her brother ran home and communicated the distressing intelligence before any effort had been made to save her life to render assistance. The water was drawn off from the mill, and the little girl was found grasping a root at the bottom of the river—which at midnight on the 3d the first time she went down, and never rose again.

An editor in writing an article upon some recent earthquake, observes that "these facts lead to the conclusion, that" the latter has such a relation to the former as cause and effect. It is our pleasure to see this paragraph, doubly charged with lead as it is, and to cast in our mite, that "the latter" is the best way to end a lead-ed leader, for its readers usually get enough of lead in it, though they might get heavy over it.—*Bost. WESTERN.

Water Lilies in the West.—The editor of the Peoria (Ill. Register has left on his table some water lilies which grow in that quarter. He says they grow on the Illinois bottoms, some times as deep as ten feet, presenting a smooth surface on the top of the water, except where there is a large circular leaf, often two feet in diameter, but unlike and fully as large as any Lily-pad ever seen in the eastern States. The great grandmothers. From the centre of this leaf rises a stalk six or eight inches in height, supporting a splendid flower, of a light orange color, and some of the petals three inches or more in length.

Murder.—A wanton and aggravated murder was committed in the town of Lorain, Ohio, on the 6th inst. on a respectable citizen, named Henderson by the name of Wm. Monday, and Thomas Calkins, made some playful remark to some persons who were quarrelling in front of a grog shop, when Monday, one of them, named John James, dealt him a blow on the head with a club, which caused his death in a few hours. Monday escaped, but after the apprehension of the murderer.

Singular Case.—Mrs. Stone, of Louisville, (Ky.) recently left her child upon the floor while she went for a bucket of water. During a moment's absence she saw a dog running across the street, dragging the child by the head. It was rescued without any serious injury, but not without difficulty, as the animal seemed loth to relinquish its prey.—Cin. Gaz.

The total loss by the late fire at St. Louis is estimated at 120,000 dollars. The remains of the persons killed by the falling of the gable end of one of the buildings were followed to the grave by the entire population of the city.

The U. S. Ship Pennsylvania.—We have been permitted to copy the following extract of a letter from an officer of the U. S. Navy, dated on board the ship Brandywine, to a gentleman in this city, dated Norfolk, Aug. 25, 1839.

"The noble line-of-battle ship Pennsylvania, which would have done so much credit steps, is ordered to be stripped and laid up here, after having been ready for sea or nearly so. She is having her repairs after the expiration of require more or less, now has, then it had ten years where somebody else built one.—Norfolk Beacon.

The number of deaths at Mobile (had well) here days previous to the 21 inst. had a decrease of 1 per cent.

Fire in Natchez, (Miss.)—A fire broke out at Natchez, Miss. on the morning of the 5th instant, which destroyed a number of warehouses and dwellings, together with a great quantity of cotton and other merchandize. The loss is estimated at about $100 000, a small portion only of which is insured.

Homicide.—Mr. Farrar, of Madison co. Miss. was deliberately shot about a week ago, by an individual named King, who claimed a negro in possession of Farrar, as his property. The murderer has escaped.

The New Orleans Picayune of the eighth says, "Not a clearing sentence, nor a word of bad language to disturb the peace. Fine weather, but still un-paring in its attacks, and deadly in its influence—citizens and negroes."

Incendiarism in Arkansas.—A letter to the Gazette Journal, from Batesville, Arkansas, dated the 27th ultimo says "Incendiarism still prevails in Washington county, Arkansas, relative to the murderer of Wright's family. The three men who were hung for the murder by the populace it is thought were innocent, and many others are resting upon the head of an individual who was shot by the Lynchers at the time of their execution. A man by the name of Wallace, residing in Fayetteville, named Jennings, Pickering, and Kingston, were instantly crushed to death. On the same day a man named Samuel Davies, at work near Leydon Spout, on the railroad, was knocked from the ledge on which he was standing by a large portion of chalk becoming suddenly detached, and falling over the ledge, was dashed to pieces.—Maidstone (Eng.) Journal.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Baltimore American has a clever chapter on economy. The editor argues that they may in some measure be considered as indicative of the peculiar character and temperament of the several communities from which they spring. He describes newspapers as the genuine growth of the times, springing up out of the wants, feelings and habits of society. Of Philadelphia, he says:

"Come next to the beautiful city near the confluence of the Delaware and Schuylkill. We breathe another atmosphere; the pulse subsides from its quick and hurried beating. One can survey the outspread sheet with calmness, and read it without haste. It is not a paper for your safety, lest you be aroused off the breakfast or parlor table the gaiter. You are among countrymen and gentlemanly people. Yet there is a heaviness about the whole, a creeping liveliness contrasting somewhat with the staid composure of the general air, and giving the German sausage, the Dutch cheese, pickles and drab coats were to be seen more profusely in the streets ten years ago than now. You will also come to another conclusion, viz.—that the Philadelphia people are not overburdened with the profound conviction that their fine city is the world, and that the world is only as they as Philadelphians, do excel all other people in the world. They are not to be found in such large numbers." If any thing good is discovered elsewhere, they can give birth to something better. They are content to be second to the world, and to cherish to the setting of a curb stone: in all the manufactures from the construction of a locomotive to the making of ice creams; and in the production of all the fine arts, pertaining to civilized life. They have the best collections of curiosities in their museums and of fresh lustre in their markets; the best schools both for medical science and literature; the cleanest of streets and the prettiest of women.

Now it must be confessed that in all these particulars, Philadelphia is not to be found in such large numbers as she ought to be. Such a work as Downing's Fruits and Fruit Trees of America, would not have all been written in Philadelphia, do excel all other people so much as the Quakers.

OBITUARY.

On Monday last Mahlon Atkinson (the father of the publisher of this paper) aged 77 years. He is one, after a pilgrimage in which he suffered a full share of the ills of mortality, but was sustained by some of the consolations of religion, and possessed in some of his experiences, he announced a repugnance to immediate dissolution, without a struggle. Several years since, he left the undoubted evidence of his faith in the Saviour, and of his hope of a future life, and the adhesions of humanity have no further power. He was ready to say farewell to be in the land of the living, and in the hope of dying good to his fellow men, and of meeting his Redeemer in heaven, where he encountered many trials and privations, and was the very youngest boy who was ever witnessed the organization of the only society left was to return to the city of his birth, and to die among his kindred and friends. That he effected, and was most thankful to Divine Providence for having the power of his way, when apparently there was no hope of success in the undertaking, and when he was left by his friends, especially and thoroughly in these branches of learning which he had chosen for his profession, and which he prepare those who desire it, for college. Much care is due to the memory of such a man. He was known as well as the moral and benevolent man, being deemed by those who knew him best, as the most perfect. He was a man of much personal, and is made as nearly as possible, like that of the Saviour of mankind.

Mr. Atkinson was a native of Burlington, N. J. and was born on the 1st of 4th mo.
